Morris School's robotics club members got the chance to show off their skills at the Manitoba Legislative Building last week. The team—which includes coach JP Jamieson, mentor Sean Conway, and students Hassaan Mustafa, Josh Hildebrandt, Andrew Hildebrandt, Kayden Grattan, and Cody Dueck—were the guests of Midland MLA Lauren Stone, who read a statement to the assembly congratulating the club for earning a spot at the Vex Robotics World Championships in May.

Bowl for Kids raises $25,000 for Big Bros.

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Over 120 people came out to VB Entertainment Centre in Winkler March 27 to support Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Pembina Valley.

The agency's annual bowling fundraiser, Bowl for Kids' Sake, was a resounding success, raising $25,000 in cash and in-kind donations in support of local mentoring programming.

"We ended up with 25 teams, which is in the ballpark of what we did last year," shared executive director Jenelle Neufeld, noting they also teamed up with Gateway Resources to fill out the lane time slots with additional enthusiastic bowlers. "It's a way for us to partner with other non-profits and be able to give back ourselves, because we're not always able to do that financially."

"They brought six teams and brought in $700 worth of pledges—so that was an added bonus."

The event also had numerous lane sponsors from local businesses eager to support the cause, and numerous companies donated goodies for the prize raffle or sponsored teams.

"It's all appreciated and all needed and just so fantastic," Neufeld said.

The funds go to help Big Bros. continue to offer its programming, which fosters positive relationships between kids and adult volunteers through one-on-one and group mentoring programs across the region.

"We are doing our very best to expand our programming," Neufeld shared, noting they've recently expanded their staff complement and hours to speed up the volunteer assessment/qualification and matching processes.

As always, the agency is in need of volunteers to make more mentoring matches possible. There are always about a dozen or so kids on the wait list.

"We have expanded our programming to do more group programming because there is such a lack of volunteers," Neufeld shared, noting last fall's Grow Youth program saw 15 young ladies come together for a one-day workshop to learn about physical wellness, balanced eating, self-esteem, and leadership. "The feedback we got really brings it all back home why we do this."

They're planning a second workshop for girls in June and another targeted at middle school boys hopefully in fall, if they can find the volunteer facilitators for it.

So far this year, the agency has had 52 children involved in its programs. Their goal is to reach 200.

It's a lofty goal, but one Neufeld is confident they'll reach.

"When you get these group programs going and you're doing 10 or 15 kids participating at a time, it really adds up," she said. "And we're hopefully going to be expanding our Grow program umbrella. We've reworked the Go Girls after school program to be more digestible—it used to be seven weeks long and we've cut it down to four, still including all the important topics and conversations but requiring less of a time commitment."

Local youth receive Yes I Can awards, scholarships

By Lorne Stelmach

Three area students were among those honoured recently by the Manitoba Council for Exceptional Children.

The provincial branch of the national Council for Exceptional Children (CEC) presented its 35th annual Yes I Can awards in connection to its mission to improve the quality of education for exceptional children and youth with a range of abilities and disabilities.

Morden Collegiate student Benny Wiebe was honoured in the transition category, which celebrates achievement in activities that lead to successful experiences in such areas as work, vocational training, or independent living.

Jessica Derksen of Rosenort School and Gracie Beckett of Nellie McClung Collegiate in Manitou were both recipients of transition scholarships, which are available to students with exceptional needs who are transitioning from high school to after-school life such as post-secondary education, job training, or employment.

Wiebe was cited for his incredible perseverance and dedication in his journey toward independence and success in the workforce. While he has faced significant challenges in communication, social interaction and executive functioning, he has never wavered in his determination to succeed.

With the support of an individualized education plan, specialized programs, and therapies tailored to his needs, Wiebe has developed essential life and work skills, allowing him to thrive in vocational training and independent living.

His hard work has led him to employment at the local thrift store, Giant Tiger, and the Pembina Valley Humane Society. Beyond his personal achievements, Benny has become an inspiration to his peers, demonstrating that with the right support, resilience, and dedication, anything is possible.

Wiebe said through resource teacher Kari Friesen that the award made him feel good and proud. He said he likes to keep busy and enjoys being with his friends at school and work.

"And Benny, if you met him in person, he would just put a smile on your face," shared Friesen, who also works in the life skills area at Morden Collegiate.

She noted Wiebe likes being involved in recycling at school as well as putting up the flag out front. In the future, he will go to work at Gateway Resources in Winkler.

"He is a huge part of our school community here. Everybody knows who he is. Everybody sees him in the hall and meets and greets him. You can't help but smile after having any interaction with him for sure."

Derksen was cited for having had a variety of experiences working with younger children including as a babysitter, a counsellor at the Roseau River Bible Camp, and as a volunteer in a Grade 1-2 class at Rosenort School. In the classroom, she led small group activities, helped students individually, and assisted with outdoor supervision.

Her citation noted that Derksen is able to anticipate the needs of students and then jump into action without being told, so this made her a valuable classroom volunteer.

One of her standout qualities is her drive to overcome adversity. Even when faced with significant challenges, she is determined to tackle each situation with a positive mindset while remaining upbeat and not allowing setbacks to hinder her progress. This attitude not only contributes to her success but also has a positive influence on those around her.

Her goal is to obtain early childhood education credentials so she can have a successful career in a day care.

"HE'S A HUGE PART OF OUR SCHOOL COMMUNITY HERE."

Below: Gracie Beckett from Nellie McClung Collegiate in Manitou also received a scholarship from the Manitoba Council for Exceptional Children.

Derksen offered a brief comment via email that the support will be vital to her future plans.

"Getting this scholarship helps me pursue my dreams in getting into college so I can do my early childhood education," she said. "Working with kids is something I enjoy doing."

Beckett was cited for having volunteered at such events as a local day care's Halloween party and at the Honey, Garlic and Maple Syrup Festival and also being part of two plays at the Manitou Opera House.

When she was younger, she enjoyed giving gifts and support to children diagnosed with cancer.

Beckett began her journey at Best Western Plus in Morden as a volunteer at the age of 15 and in three years has grown into a hardworking, dedicated, and dependable employee. Beckett plans to continue to build her skills at the hotel.

Headway made on Plum Coulee pedestrian bridge

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Plum Coulee is getting closer to having its long-awaited pedestrian bridge in place.

After years of planning, appealing to the government for approval, and fundraising, headway has finally been made at the site alongside the Hespler Drain that cuts the north side of the community from the south.

A pair of concrete piers have been installed on either side of the dike—a sign of things to come, shares committee member Allen Funk.

“The pilings went down and then the structure on top of the pilings was just done,” he said last week. “A couple of days ago they took the boarding off and we’re good to start building the actual bridge.”

The 37-foot long, six-foot wide bridge will make it easier and safer for residents to get from either end of the community; currently, the official route requires pedestrians to go the long way around and walk down a busy highway.

Given the rate of development in Plum Coulee’s south side, that’s just not safe nor feasible anymore, says bridge committee chair June Letkeman.

“Just look at that new development,” she said, gesturing to the houses being built a stone’s throw from the bridge site. “This is so important. We really need this bridge.”

“We’ll have instant use on it,” added Funk.

The committee hopes to begin building the bridge this summer and to have it completed and in use sometime in fall.

But they need to do one more big fundraising push to get the project across the finish line.

The entire build comes with a price tag of about $450,000. They’ve raised more than $250,000 so far and have high hopes that a few sizeable government grants will bring the remaining total down significantly.

“We’re thinking if we go to our supporters and we’re able to find about $100,000 more in donations, that’ll do it,” Funk says.

The community has really thrown its support behind this project, and Letkeman is confident this last bit will be achieved, especially now that progress can be seen at the site itself.

For $250 you can sponsor a board on the bridge, with your name recognized at the site in thanks.

“We’ve sold quite a few of those already,” Letkeman shared, thanking every donor so far and urging those who have been considering making a donation to do so now.

Donations can be made by reaching out to Letkeman at 204-362-0501 or Kyle Wiebe at 204-362-4730.

Winkler council approves $28.2M budget for 2025

By Ashleigh Viveiros

At its March 25 meeting, Winkler city council unveiled a $28.2 million financial plan for the year ahead that will see the average ratepayer’s tax bill increase by 4.2 per cent.

“We’ve been working over the last number of years to try to make sure that we do the things that we have to do in order to set Winkler up to be a financially sustainable community for the long-term and for us to finish our projects as we need to,” Mayor Henry Siemens said of the rise in taxes. “We’ve been careful to try to minimize those increases as much as possible, looking at a slow and steady pace to doing that. And mostly, we’re well on track.”

The request from the Pembina Valley Water Co-op last year for a sizeable injection of capital funding from its members, coupled with several major capital projects on the go in Winkler itself, required a slightly higher increase than usual this year, the mayor noted.

“We’ve been shooting towards that three per cent-ish number over the term of our three-year budget to try to go back to the community carefully and not ask for too much too quickly, but to still allow us to decrease the amount of time that we put debentures out there and allow us to build out the three major projects that we’re mid-project on, whether we look at the wastewater treatment or water treatment or the arena renovations.

“Those projects are coming along well, they’re coming along on budget, on time, but it is still monies being spent, so we want to make sure that we allow ourselves room to also fund our reserves so we’re able to repair, replace, and renew projects as they need to happen.”

To that end, the city has undertaken a comprehensive asset management plan to determine exactly what infrastructure and equipment it has, how old it is, and when it might need to be replaced. The replacement value across the board is pegged at over $391M.

That together with the new multi-year financial plan allows council to better plan for the future while also saving $7.8 million in interest by reducing debenture terms to 10 years from the previous 20.

“That’s an absolutely huge amount of money that we’re able to leave for the future rather than paying it in interest,” Siemens noted.

The three-year plan—which calls for tax increases of 3.30 per cent for both 2026 and 2027—gives city staff a much clearer picture of the funding available when it comes to long-term strategic planning.

“That long-term planning allows us to get to a financially sustainable community that delivers the services that they need, that our community wants and desires, at exactly the right time,” Siemens said. “We’re confident that this is the route to go. It will help Winkler get to a place that we’re able to do what we need to do when we need to do it, without coming [to taxpayers] for a really big ask in any given year.”

The 2025 budget sees the mill rate decrease from 13.967 to 13.315. But because it’s an assessment year, property values have gone up, which means the city will take in about $17.2 million (61 per cent of its revenue for the year) even with the lower mill rate.

For a residential home previously assessed at $300,000 but now valued at $330,600, municipal taxes will increase $95.33 to $1,980, a 5.06 per cent increase. Taxpayers will also pay a $160 waste fee and $91 for the city’s health care funding special levy for a total tax bill of $2,231.

Meanwhile, a commercial property valued at $1 million last year but $1.077M this year is looking at a tax bill of $9,321, a 2.67 per cent increase of $242. Commercial ratepayers also pay the $91 health care funding levy.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO?

From the operating budget of $28.2 million, a full 23 per cent goes to reserves, 17 per cent to fund the police department, 14 per cent to recreation and culture, 11 per cent to both administration and transportation costs, 10 per cent for fiscal services, four per cent to waste disposal, and three per cent each to the fire, planning, and economic departments.

The $4.5M utilities budget covers several major capital expenditures, including a much-needed new vacuum truck, well replacements, and $1.47M for the ongoing manhole restoration project.

Other expenditures for the year ahead include $693,000 on equipment (including a new sand truck and a truck for the fire department) and $1.6M on transportation/drainage projects, including the renewal of

Home Routes tour looking for venues in Morden-Winkler

By Lorne Stelmach

The people behind a grassroots music movement and are going strong and hoping to expand their footprint in southern Manitoba.

Home Routes/Chemin Chez Nous was founded in 2007 with the aim of building more infrastructure for folk and roots musicians to play in more communities across Canada.

It is being achieved by partnering with local community members to create a network of hosts across the country who donate their time and homes or find appropriate venues to host music events in intimate and unique settings.

"We would love to have a host in Morden and Winkler ... maybe half of the season could be in Morden, half could be in Winkler," speculated Leonard Podolak, one of the lead organizers.

Since 2007, it is estimated Home Routes has been involved with close to 12,000 concerts in 50-plus communities across Canada involving over 1,100 touring artists.

What makes Home Routes special is it offers a rare chance to experience live music in a cozy, welcoming setting, creates opportunities for audiences to connect personally with artists, and supports musicians by providing guaranteed performance fees and well-organized tour routes.

Its success relies on dedicated community members who open their homes or small venues to host artists and create unforgettable live music experiences, said Podolak, as they seek to expand and draw music lovers to join their network.

"We're working mostly in communities that are sort of off the typical beaten path," he said. "It's a rare opportunity to discover something new and to bring the community together."

It is a good opportunity for the artists as well, Podolak noted. The tours draw on talent with varying levels of success and achievements and a wide range of styles.

"We work with artists who have been there and also artists who are going there," he said. "We work with artists from all across Canada and sometimes around the world."

There is something special about the feeling and the vibe around the shows being in a smaller setting.

"It's mostly in houses, in people's private homes, which creates a completely different and way more intimate setting for a concert ... everybody is all in the room there together," Podolak said. "Our hosts are community volunteers who are doing all of this work. It is a huge contribution that you can make to your community."

"It's more than just moving the furniture—you have to spread the word in town. It's a bit of a job, but it's rewarding ... we like to say it's like you're back stage."

Deandra Braun, events and activities co-ordinator at The Gardens on Tenth in Altona, noted they have been involved with the Home Routes tours for the past two seasons and also before the pandemic.

"The Home Routes shows have been great. We have a crowd of 25 to 35 people usually, and there's a variety of different music genres that come through, which is also great. They stay in our guest suite for the night and have supper and breakfast in our facility.

"It's a great way to have music from across Canada and the world come through and share their music," Braun added.

"Being a Home Routes host feels fantastic. We are bringing incredible artists to rural locations and this is huge. Be it living rooms or small venues, we are thrilled to be a part of this," said Pamela Cavers of United Community Arts in Pilot Mound, where they share the concert season with a couple of other local communities including Baldur, Cypress River, and Cartwright.

QUITE A LINEUP

Podolak shared that they have had a great lineup of performers this season so far.

The most recent tour in March featured Gangspil in Pilot Mound and Altona. The act took audiences on an entertaining journey through the traditions of Danish folk music, including old dance tunes and songs from every corner of their Scandinavian home country.

music. They take the stage April 10 in Altona.

"What a wonderful group of musicians across so many genres ... the season will be diverse ... it's a real smorgasbord," said Podolak.

Spring flood outlook remains low to moderate

By Voice staff

Manitoba is looking at a low-to-moderate risk of spring flooding, the provincial forecast centre announced last week.

As always, extreme weather conditions over the next few weeks could change things, but right now the Manitoba Transportation and Infrastructure's Hydrologic Forecast Centre advises that most Manitoba lakes are expected to be within desired operating ranges after the spring runoff, making the risk of flooding there low.

A moderate risk of flooding is in effect for the Assiniboine River main stem from Russell to Brandon, Souris River, Qu'Appelle River, and Interlake region (including the Fisher River and Icelandic River).

A low/minor flood risk is in effect for the Red River, Pembina River, Rat River, Roseau River, Winnipeg River, Saskatchewan River, Churchill River, Carrot River and Swan River, and the Whiteshell Lakes area.

The system that brought snow to much of central and southern Manitoba last weekend was factored into this outlook, the centre noted.

Depending on precipitation over the coming weeks, minimal operation of the Red River Floodway and the Portage Diversion may be necessary. The Shellmouth Dam is being operated in consultation with the Shellmouth Dam liaison committee to provide storage capacity for reservoir inflows to reduce flooding downstream as well as ensure a sufficient reservoir level for recreation and water supply.

Ice-cutting and breaking activities have been completed on the Red and Icelandic rivers and were slated taking place on Fisher River last week.

As warmer weather sets in, Manitobans are advised to stay off the ice on waterways, rivers, and retention ponds.

Main St. (the adjacent parts of it, at least, that the city are responsible for, as it's a provincially-owned roadway), Crystal Cres., and the city's bike path system.

Speaking to that last project, Siemens noted the plan is to finish extending the Winkler system to connect east of town with the Reinfeld path.

"That's part of making sure that we have as much active trail network as we can, and to expand it where we can and renew it where it needs to be renewed," he said.

The full budget presentation is available on the City of Winkler's YouTube channel.

OUR SISTER PUBLICATIONS

It is April, a time of newness, a time of fresh growth and life, but the world feels like it forgot about spring and is settling into a long winter.

How easy is it to look around us and become pessimistic?

We continue to see global conflict and death with no sign of end. There is fear, uncertainty, and doubt everywhere. Prices are rising in the face of massive tectonic political and economic shifts around the world, and people are quick to blame with little real information.

Ugh. One is tempted to believe we live in the worst of times.

Once this temptation falls on me I take a deep breath and work hard to find things to be thankful of.

I'm thankful I am not my grandparents, who fled the anti-Jewish pogroms in Russia in the early 1900s that saw thousands of Jews, men, women, and children murdered and their property stolen.

I'm thankful I'm not my grandfather, who sat as a tail gunner in RAF Lancaster bombers through the entirety of WW2 after joining at the tender age of 18. A role that had an average lifespan of two weeks.

I'm thankful I'm not my mum, who, at the young age of 17, homeless and placed in an asylum as was the practice then when there were no foster homes available, was subjected to electroshock therapy because, for some reason, she was sad.

I know this falls into the "it could be worse" category but, frankly, it could be worse—substantially worse.

I live in what I consider the greatest country on earth. I have free health-care; I own a home and two cars. I have an awesome job. I have incredible children and the most amazing, loving wife a guy could ask for.

For me, things could be far worse.

In 2011 Harvard psychologist Steven Pinker asserted in his book The Better Angels of Our Nature: Why Violence Has Declined, that humans are currently living in the most peaceful time in our entire history. Right now. This is hopeful.

It is not so hopeful to the Palestinian living in Gaza or the mother of an Israeli hostage. It is not so hopeful for the family whose young son is fighting on the front lines in Ukraine or those currently suffering devastation in Syria and elsewhere certainly.

But for me, for many, things could be substantially worse.

The point? My anxiety. My angst and fear. These things feel real, but they could easily be relegated to the category of "first world problems" and I need to reflect on that before diving into the deep end of hopelessness.

Heck, even within Canada things are not so bad for me. I mean, I know someone paying almost $2,500 a month rent for a one-bedroom apartment outside of Toronto. By comparison, Manitoba is far more affordable.

I'm not saying "stop being sad" because frankly that kind of statement is wildly unhelpful. I am saying take a look around you and cast your vision further afield than your living room to build some context around your sad.

Find that thin golden thread of hope we all need, whatever (or whomever) it is, and hang onto it like it's a lifeline.

"Gracie is an extraordinary young lady, and her journey is an inspiration to all who meet her," her mother Elizabeth shared in commenting on Beckett's behalf. "Whether it's handing out homemade cards and gifts to children at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital or celebrating her remarkable 15-year milestone of being cancer-free by raising donations for the Candlelighters Childhood Cancer Support Group, Gracie's generosity knows no bounds.

"She finds joy in giving back to her community, and her actions speak volumes about her character. Despite the challenges she has faced, Gracie has never let adversity dim her light," Elizabeth said. "Gracie's path has not always been easy, especially when it comes to learning. Yet, through perseverance, an incredible team of educators and an unwavering positive attitude, she has overcome each obstacle," she continued. "She has worked incredibly hard, not only to overcome her personal challenges but also to help others along the way.

"Receiving this scholarship is a testament to her dedication, perseverance and selflessness. Gracie is truly proud of what she's accomplished, and so is everyone who has had the privilege of witnessing her growth."

Former Portage-Lisgar MP honoured

By Lorne Stelmach

Former Portage-Lisgar MP Candice Bergen was able to hand out many honours during her time serving in Parliament, but she instead was now the recipient of one.

Bergen was among the recipients of the King Charles III Coronation Medals presented recently by Manitoba senator Don Plett.

The award was in recognition of her service that included serving as an MP from 2008 to 2023 as well as taking on the role of interim leader of the Conservative Party and the leader of the Opposition from February to September 2022.

"It was a lovely surprise ... I was very happy and excited ... it was obviously an honour," said Bergen, who now calls Winnipeg home.

"I've given away a number of different medals. The Queen's Diamond Jubilee Medal I gave when I was a MP, and I gave away the Queen's Platinum Medal," she recalled. "But now, being retired, to be on the receiving end was really lovely.

"It's very kind and gratifying, and I felt quite honoured by it all," Bergen said, recalling that presenting the platinum medals was one of her last official events before retiring from elected office.

"So many people do so many things to contribute to our community and our province, so it's wonderful to be able to give," she said. "They say to be able to give is better than to receive, but receiving one was pretty nice as well."

Bergen added it was also special to receive it from Plett.

"He was there when I was helping the party back together and was able to shepherd us through a pretty difficult time, so him recognizing what I did in that way ... he really saw it as a service not just to our party but to the country, who needed a strong opposition at that time."

Bergen takes pride in her time in office and her service to the country.

"When I think about it, I go, wow, I can't believe a girl from Morden, Manitoba ended up being the leader of the official opposition," she said, noting that she was actually the last leader of Her Majesty's Royal Opposition and then the first leader of His Majesty's Royal Opposition.

"I look back fondly at that time," she said. "Obviously, being a Member of Parliament was a great honour, and I was happy to be able to serve Portage-Lisgar.

"A lot happened over the course of being an MP, but then being able to be the leader during that very difficult tumultuous time in the party, in the country ... the emergencies act was being invoked ... people were very upset," said Bergen.

"I was able to bring my party back together, come back to our Conservative principles, which was so important for our party to get back to what we believed as Conservatives ... and then be an effective and strong opposition ... I held Justin Trudeau to account and did it with a really great team behind me."

Winkler chamber announces business award winners

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler and District Chamber of Commerce is shining a spotlight on five local businesses and organizations with its 2025 P.W. Enns Business Awards.

"For all of the awards, the nominations come in from the community," said chamber executive director Tanya Chateauf. "So these are outstanding businesses that the community has selected.

"They're outstanding in many different areas ... how they contribute to our community and give back, their workplace culture and how they treat their employees, and then also the experience from the customer's point of view as well."

The winners include:

- Business Excellence Award: Tri Koating Inc. This family-owned and operated business provides power coating, manufacturing, and assembly services to the area. Since 2013, they've grown from 6,600 square feet to 56,000 sq. ft., operating three paint lines and one of the largest custom powder coating ovens in Manitoba.

- Business Builder Award: Mulligans Restaurant. This restaurant serves as a complement to the Winkler Centennial Golf Course, offering everything from burgers and fries to fine dining courtesy of owner Andrea Thiessen and chef Nathan Pelsner and their dedicated staff.

- Community Builder Award: The Property Brokers Real Estate Group Inc. Realtors Wes Harder and Tim Friesen started up this real estate company from scratch, bringing together over 25 years of experience in the industry when they did so. Today have become a fixture in the Winkler area real estate market.

- Customer Service Award: EMCO Corporation. Founded in Ontario in 1906, this company is one of the oldest members of the construction market in Canada. They are one of the nation's largest integrated distributors of construction products, providing top-level customer service in each of their local branches.

- Non-Profit Service Award: Katie Cares. Through the Katie's Cottage

respite home, this charity provides a home away from home for families who need to be close to the hospital while a loved one receives care. They also provide teddy bears and care packages to child patients.

The awards will be presented at a gala taking place the evening of Wednesday, May 14 at the Buttercup Celebration Hall.

HONOURING EXCELLENCE

Taking time to celebrate the accomplishments of Winkler businesses is important to the chamber, Chateauf noted.

"Over the last few years, the business community has struggled with many different challenges, and they continue to do so," she said. "So I think it's important to sit back and say, 'Hey, what are we doing right? How can we celebrate that?'"

"It's also a way to bring our community together, so we work with our sponsors to put on this event. We definitely wouldn't be able to do it without them, so we're grateful to our sponsors who help us celebrate these businesses awards for our community."

The chamber is trying something new with this year's gala, as there will not be a guest speaker.

"We're really putting a huge focus on celebrating the award recipients," Chateauf explained. "And we're doing a four-course dinner, which is a little unique for us, adding a course in there and creating a real food experience as well."

There will also be local entertainment, though those details were still being firmed up at press time.

Tickets are $150 each, plus tax, and can be reserved online at winklerchamber.com/events or by emailing admin@winklerchamber.com.

All are welcome to attend, chamber member or not.

"We really want this evening to be about celebrating, about everyone having a good time, and the opportunity to network and really connect with people around the table," Chateauf said.

CNIB visit raises awareness in Morden-Winkler

CNIB Vision Mate program coordinator Ben Neufeld was in Morden-Winkler last week to raise awareness about the agency's programs and volunteer opportunities.

Multiple programs for the visually impaired are looking for local volunteers

By Lorne Stelmach

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) visited Morden and Winkler last week to not only raise awareness but also with the hope of recruiting volunteers.

Ultimately, the organization would love to see a support group in place in the area for those who are either blind or with low vision.

"We had done a Mobile Hub out in Steinbach ... and the feedback we received from that is about trying to set up a group or reestablish a group so that people have more of a regular peer support," said Ben Neufeld, who is Vision Mate co-ordinator and Mobile Hub co-ordinator for CNIB in Manitoba. "The same thing is true in the Morden and Winkler context ... you want folks to have common spaces where they can gather together and share their challenges.

"With any group, it really hinges a lot on who the facilitators are ... if they really make people feel welcome."

Neufeld touched on the Mobile Hub, which is an initiative to bring awareness of the CNIB resources and services available to people and families living with vision loss.

Visits to communities like Morden and Winkler also serve to help CNIB and Neufeld make connections in the community while also promoting the Vision Mate program.

"I'm just going around Morden and chatting with folks and getting a better understanding of the community," he said.

There are volunteer virtual and in-person opportunities available for those who want to get involved.

"The virtual is having routine phone calls with someone who's blind or low vision," Neufeld explained, "and the classic would be helping someone in their home or out in the community doing different things like assisting them in getting groceries or stopping by for a social visit ... going for a walk, kind of whatever they want to get up to," he said.

"I like people to match for about two hours in a given week," he added, noting it doesn't need to take that much time to make a real difference in a person's life.

The key to the whole process is building a relationship with the clients.

"I think the important thing is to let people know they're not alone in their challenges and that there's a broader network that they can connect to," Neufeld said. "And as an organization, we have some different supports to try to reach people and then expanding that to reach more Manitobans."

Stanley Soil reports on a busy year

By Lorne Stelmach

The past year was another busy one for the Stanley Soil Management Association.

From selling and planting trees to dealing with a notorious noxious weed, the association continues to be busy and see continued growth and interest.

"There's important work being done, and it's a lot of interesting work," said technician Richard Warkentin following the association's annual meeting last Friday.

One of their most significant ventures each year is tree planting as well as their maintenance and care.

"We planted 19 miles of trees, and we planted eight miles of trees in gaps," Warkentin said, estimating over 18,000 trees were planted across the region.

"One of the biggest projects that we did was we also participated in a project at Swan Lake First Nation. We were involved in the planting of over 22,000 trees on a 60 acres piece of property," he said, noting they were mostly planted by machine but some had to be done by hand.

"It was a time consuming project. It was a major plantation that we were involved with there," Warkentin said, noting it also involved both the Pembina Valley and Redboine watershed districts.

In addition, there were various other planting projects across a large area of southern Manitoba with over a dozen sites involved.

"The biggest one was about five miles of trees that we planted at a site near Letellier."

In addition, tree sales involved almost 40,000 trees being sold to over 60 customers. About 45 per cent of these trees were planted at Pembina Valley Watershed District sites.

"One of their big programs is the shelterbelt planting," shared Warkentin. "We have become more of a tree supplier, and last year we actually sold approximately 40,000 trees, and almost 18,000 of those trees were supplied to Pembina Valley Watershed District projects."

Meanwhile, another significant ongoing project revolves around diffuse knapweed, which is rated as a tier one noxious weed and is located in a particular area of the RM of Stanley.

"And it's the only place in all of Manitoba where this noxious weed is found, and tier one means if you see it, you have to destroy it," Warkentin said. "It's got the potential of becoming a real problem ... we try to contain it."

"We spent basically one day doing some cursory scouting, and we found so many plants," he added. "It's concerning that this diffuse knapweed seems to be increasing, and we'll have to raise more awareness. The landowner is the biggest part and needs to be aware of it."

"This year was worse. I've never really seen as much in all the years that I've been monitoring it. We have to be more diligent in getting it."

Finally, Warkentin said some of his time is also devoted to raising awareness, particularly with youth.

"We got some funding through the Two Billion Tree Program to make school presentations," he said, noting they also have a presence at various festivals and events such as Arbor Day in Morden. "I did quite a few school presentations on the value of trees. That was kind of fun to do ... and we handed out some trees."

At the AGM, guest speaker David Scott of Swan Lake First Nations touched on a youth environmental training program. The goal is to bring aboriginal and non-aboriginal youth together in land-based environmental training through both Ojibwe teachings and western science.

Morden Festival of the Arts April sessions coming up

By Voice staff

The Morden Festival of the Arts continues this month for the final sessions of its 50th year.

The vocal and choral takes place April 14-15 at Morden Mennonite Church with vocal Monday at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. then choral Tuesday at 9:15 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

There will be solos and duets as well as choirs from J.R. Walkof School, Morden Collegiate, École Morden Middle School, École Discovery Trails, and Minnewasta School through the day Tuesday.

Next then will be French and English speech arts April 22-23 at 9:30 a.m., 1:15 p.m., and 7 p.m. Tuesday and 9 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. Wednesday at the Morden Alliance Church.

There will be solos, duets, trios and quartets as well as 10 speech choirs participating from ÉMMS and Discovery Trails in both French and English.

On that Wednesday, April 23, there will also be a band session starting at 9 a.m. in the Morden Collegiate band room.

The finale of the festival will be the highlights concert Sunday, May 4 at 2 p.m. at Westside Community Church with performances recommended by the adjudicators of each discipline throughout the festival season. Admission is by donation.

Awards will be presented to many festival participants, with some recommended to represent the local festival at the provincial level. The 2025 Loreena McKennitt Award will also be presented to a festival participant judged to have reached a level of excellence in his or her musical studies and who plans to continue studies and pursue a career in the performing arts.

> HOME ROUTES, FROM PG. 5

Performers have also sung the praises of Home Routes.

"Whenever I tour this way, I learn so much about people and how to put on a strong solo show," shared musician Shari Ulrich. "It's single-handedly responsible for me being a much better performer. I think Home Routes is the greatest friend to artists, audiences and Canada."

"The beauty of Home Routes is the audience is so appreciative and supportive," said singer-songwriter William Prince. "Playing two full sets for a house of people is incredible. You can feel the response without amplification, and you're not fighting anyone in the room for your place."

"Time spent with music lovers who cook real meals and open their homes as a haven of rest—it's a beautiful journey. Home Routes is a treasure and tremendous support in keeping live music thriving and artists driving."

New manager launching season at Altona Community Garden

By Lori Penner

As spring approaches, excitement is growing at the Altona Community Garden, where a new season of planting and community building is about to begin.

This year, the garden welcomes a fresh face at the helm: Joel Martin, who is taking on the role of garden manager. With a passion for organization and community engagement, Martin is already hard at work ensuring that everything runs smoothly for returning and new gardeners alike.

Located east of the Millennium Exhibition Centre, the Altona Community Garden offers 180 plots for local residents to cultivate their own vegetables, herbs, and flowers. The registration process has been streamlined this year, with Martin introducing online registration. Returning gardeners are given priority, followed by those on the waiting list.

"We used to have people come to the mall," Martin explains. "Now we're using an online form, and I'm also reaching out by email or phone."

While managing registrations has been his first big task, Martin is also introducing new initiatives to support a sense of community within the garden, including launching a volunteer-based program called Garden Ambassadors. These volunteers will be present at the garden to offer guidance, answer questions, and help new gardeners settle in.

"They'll be assigned certain areas of the garden, and we're working on providing either a vest or a name tag so people know who they are," says Martin. "Since I can't always be on-site, having these ambassadors will give more access to people in the garden, especially newcomers."

Another exciting development this year is the availability of accessible garden plots, designed for individuals with mobility challenges. These raised beds are table-height, eliminating the need for bending or kneeling.

"You can just sit on a walker or stand while working, and water access will be right there," Martin explains. "Last year, only two gardeners used them because they weren't fully completed yet, but this year we'll have 10 available."

Meanwhile, garden plots are still available for the upcoming season, though spaces are filling up fast.

"Right now, I might have 20 plots open, but I'm sure they'll all be taken soon," says Martin. "If we don't have enough new gardeners, there are always people who would love a second plot."

A full plot costs $25, a half plot is $12.50, and an accessible plot is $10. These fees include access to essential gardening resources such as compost, tools, a rototiller, and water. Additionally, thanks to the generosity of Elmer's Manufacturing, brand-new bicycle racks will be installed this spring for those who prefer to cycle to the garden.

Beyond the garden plots, Martin is also managing the adjacent community orchard, which is set to expand this year.

"We're planting our first two or three rows of fruit trees and building a path that will connect the garden through the orchard to the northern recreational trail," he says. "We're hoping to establish a volunteer base to help maintain the orchard with work bees once a month."

The orchard's development includes the installation of a drip irrigation system, which will make watering the trees more efficient.

"Just getting the trees in the ground will be exciting, and the trail will be a big addition," Martin adds. "We'll also be bringing water from the garden into the orchard to support the new plantings."

To help fund these projects, the community is invited to a special fundraiser event on May 10 at The Community Exchange. Dubbed "Fruit Jam," this event will feature live music, food, a raffle, and a silent auction for a handmade quilt. Musical performances will include Callum Morrison, the W.C. Miller Chamber Choir, and the Martin Trio.

For more information, or to inquire about available plots, you can contact Martin at jmmanitoba@protonmail.com or call 204-216-1826.

Altona budget aims to balance strategic growth with fiscal caution

By Lori Penner

The Town of Altona has released its financial plan for 2025, focusing on strategic investments and fiscal responsibility to enhance community services while managing tax implications for residents.

The municipal tax levy for 2025 is set at $6,021,037, marking a net increase of $225,371, or 3.89 per cent, compared to the previous year. This rise includes a supplemental tax increase of $122,326, resulting from new properties and reassessments following renovations.

In light of the recent property reassessment by the Provincial Assessment Branch, Altona's municipal mill rate will decrease by 7.61 per cent, from 19.70 to 18.20.

Property assessments have seen an average increase of 12.5 per cent in Altona, with residential properties experiencing a 15.7 per cent rise and commercial properties a 9.5 per cent uptick.

Individual tax bills will vary based on property assessments. Mayor Harv Schroeder encouraged residents and business owners to review their assessments and understand how they impact their taxes.

"An increase in assessment does not necessarily equate to higher taxes," he noted. "If your property has increased in assessed value by more than the average in Altona, your taxes may increase."

The 2025 budget projects total revenues of $11,135,223, with property taxes contributing 54.1 per cent of this amount. This marks a decrease from the previous year's revenue of just over $12 million. Schroeder attributed this reduction to the absence of one-time funding received in the prior year.

"We had some extra basket funding last year, so that brought it up," he explained.

The capital budget is set at $2,435,100, focusing on several key projects. These include investment in a new mini pumper truck for Altona/Rhineland Emergency Services, continuing improvements to local infrastructure, acquisition of a new tractor for the public works department, purchase of land for a future shop, procurement of a new police truck to support law enforcement operations, and a $100,000 commitment to the Kiddie Sunshine Centre childcare project as part of a 10-year pledge.

Additionally, $45,000 is allocated for a public transportation pilot project in partnership with Community Exchange, and $137,500 is designated for various research initiatives, including an Urban Forest Management strategy, Climate Risk Assessment and Adaptation Plan, Centre Avenue Active Transportation Corridor Financial Plan, and a local history research project.

Schroeder highlighted the importance of these strategic initiatives, stating, "Under our strategic plan, we're committed to supporting economic development, and growing a sustainable community."

Despite these investments, certain projects have been deferred, such as the Cemetery Perpetual Care Plan, Van Gogh painting restoration, and renovations to the Golden West Plaza space formerly occupied by the Altona library. Schroeder explained that these decisions were made to ensure fiscal responsibility amid economic uncertainties.

"We were very mindful as we made this year's budget. We still don't know what the implications are going to be with the tariffs."

Prairie Roots and Wings: A journey through time and continents

By Lori Penner

For Philippe Sabourin, writing his book Prairie Roots and Wings was a deeply personal endeavor.

Initially, he set out to share his experiences with his grandchildren, hoping to offer them a glimpse into his life and the lessons he had learned. But when the book was completed, it had evolved into something much more: a memoir, a travelogue, and a reflection on history, culture, and human connection.

Published by FriesenPress earlier this year, Prairie Roots and Wings chronicles Sabourin's upbringing in the Red River Valley, his extensive travels across four continents, and the values that have shaped his perspective on life. The book also delves into the history of Mennonites and Francophones who arrived in southern Manitoba in 1876 after a perilous voyage across the Great Lakes.

Sabourin, a retired professional agrologist, brings a wealth of knowledge to his storytelling. His background ensures that the book is rich with accurate information, particularly about agriculture, food production, and environmental issues. But beyond the facts, he hopes to inspire readers with a powerful message, one that is best encapsulated in the Zulu word ubuntu, which translates to "humanity to others."

"I think in today's world, it's an important message," Sabourin says.

Born in 1950 on a mixed farm near St. Jean, Sabourin grew up with a deep appreciation for the land. He later pursued a university education in agriculture, joining the family business, Sabourin Seed Service, as a young man.

Over the years, he worked in agricultural engineering, opened a consulting firm, and even spent a decade as a teacher's aide and substitute teacher with the Division Scolaire Franco-Manitobaine.

His book offers insights into rural life, making it a valuable read for urban audiences interested in understanding the agricultural world. But it also speaks to those with a passion for travel, as Sabourin's adventures take center stage throughout much of the narrative.

At 24, he embarked on his first major international trip, spending three months exploring South America, including the Galápagos Islands and Machu Picchu. That journey was only the beginning.

Over the years, Sabourin's travels have taken him across the globe. In Rwanda, he learned about the country's tragic history and marveled at the wild mountain gorillas. In Botswana, he explored the Okavango Delta and met the San people of the Kalahari Desert. His journeys have also brought him to Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia, and a three-and-a-half-month tour of Asia, where he visited Indonesia including Bali and Borneo, Cambodia, Vietnam, China, Thailand, and Laos.

From the vast plains of the Serengeti in Tanzania to the breathtaking Iguazu Falls in Brazil and Argentina, his experiences have given him a profound appreciation for the beauty and diversity of the world. But, above all, his travels have reinforced a simple truth: people everywhere share the same fundamental desires to be happy and avoid suffering.

In addition to personal stories and travel experiences, Prairie Roots and Wings explores the history of the Francophone community in Manitoba.

End bullying in schools

Over the years, concerns have been growing about finding effective ways to end bullying in schools. The key is to adopt a unified and proactive approach. Here are some ways to do this:

- Promote a school culture that doesn't tolerate bullying
- Provide tools to help students develop empathy and social skills
- Create communication campaigns to encourage reporting
- Intervene quickly and consistently in bullying situations
- Establish clear sanctions for bullies, like restorative action, detention, suspension or expulsion
- Involve parents, students, school staff and management in developing prevention strategies
- Rigorously follow up on actions taken to ensure their effectiveness

Marking Epilepsy Awareness Month

By Lorne Stelmach

ple. Of those, 42,000 are children and youth. An estimated 54 new cases are diagnosed every day—about 20,000 Canadians.

Purple was the colour of the day last Wednesday for the annual epilepsy awareness campaign.

March was Epilepsy Awareness Month, and March 26 was Purple Day as a means to help make more people aware that epilepsy impacts 23,000 people in Manitoba alone.

“We’re just trying to promote understanding as much as possible,” said Chris Kullman, who not only lives with epilepsy but is also vice-president of the Epilepsy and Seizure Association of Manitoba.

“Epilepsy is a significant condition that people have, and it’s important to understand it. There can be a big stigma around it,” he suggested. “It’s important that people understand what it is, how you get it ... there’s still a lot of myths out there about it.”

Epilepsy is a brain condition that causes recurring seizures. In some people the cause can be identified, but for others it’s unknown.

Seizure symptoms can also vary widely. Some people may lose awareness during a seizure, while others don’t. Some people stare blankly for a few seconds during a seizure, while others may repeatedly twitch their arms or legs as convulsions.

Having a single seizure doesn’t mean you have epilepsy, which is diagnosed if you’ve had at least two unprovoked seizures at least 24 hours apart.

Treatment with medicines or sometimes surgery can control seizures for most people with epilepsy. Some require lifelong treatment, while for others, seizures go away. Some children with epilepsy may outgrow the condition.

The prevalence rate is about 1 in 100 Canadians—roughly 300,000 peo-

“Awareness is the most important thing,” said Kullman, who noted how it is estimated three or four per cent of people have epilepsy, while about one in ten will have a seizure sometime in their life.

“So multiply that by population and you’ve got a lot of people ... but it’s not talked about very much, so that is what Purple Day can do, just increase the awareness.

“It’s a worldwide recognition of epilepsy and promoting epilepsy awareness,” he continued. “It’s quite interesting because it was initiated by a young girl in 2008, and she just tried starting to do this on her own, and it actually just grew and grew and now it’s worldwide, which is pretty great.”

There is also an International Epilepsy Day on Feb. 10, but Purple Day has started to get good uptake in Manitoba, with many places lighting up purple such as the Dauphin city hall and Selkirk water tower.

“We have quite a few places in the province engage with us,” Kullman noted. “The Legislative building will light up purple on the central tower after dark. The Winnipeg sign at The Forks was going to light up purple.”

And Kullman feels there is much progress being made with Manitobans living with epilepsy now being able to access better treatment through a new epilepsy monitoring unit and an adjacent neurological recovery unit at the Health Sciences Centre.

“I have had epilepsy myself ... when I was a kid, there was just nothing out there ... and there was a stigma about it,” he said. “Of course, with social media now, it makes it so much easier to get the word out there.”

Manitoba landmarks lit up for Purple Day last week in honour of Epilepsy Awareness Month.

BTHC expansion progressing on schedule

By Lorne Stelmach

The expansion of Boundary Trails Health Centre continues to move along, and officials are pleased with where the project is at now.

"Everything is on track, everything's timing out well ... progress is going well, and everybody's really excited," said Kyle MacNair, who is the implementation lead for clinical programming with Southern Health-Santé Sud.

"I think people are excited to see things coming together," he added. "And we're also going heavy duty into recruitment now as well."

What had been estimated to be a $100 million project is being completed in phases and will include 24 additional acute care inpatient beds, an expanded emergency department, new state-of-the-art operating room, expansion of the cancer care unit, dedicated space for palliative care services, and a level two nursery designed to provide services to premature newborns with complex feeding needs.

The new community services building will enable existing community services to be relocated from the current hospital building. Those services in the new building will include public health, midwifery, home care services, children and youth rehabilitation services, and a centre for hope healing garden and healing courtyard.

Then, once all of that has been accomplished, work will begin on the renovation of the existing hospital space.

"The first part of the project that doesn't get a lot of attention but is very critical is the energy centre," noted MacNair. "That's the backup generators and the building systems, and it's a separate building ... and it's coming online in April."

As part of what he called the commissioning stage, MacNair said they are basically going to make sure all the lights turn on and the water runs.

"It is pretty integral. "It's the backup power system for the hospital. It's a safety system for the hospital," he said.

The next building to be completed will be the in-patient unit with the 24 medicine and palliative beds

"We've basically got what's called the mock-up room finished in there," MacNair shared. "We had one of the clinical teams in, and we've had other clinical teams in over the last couple weeks just checking out the areas, making sure that everything is exactly the way that we want ... find any problems.

"One problem we found when we did the mock up was one of the shower hose connections is too close to one of the hand rails, so we've just got to adjust that," he said. "These are the important small details that you might not catch in the design phase until you see it."

They will then basically replicate that room 22 times, but there will be two specialized rooms for bariatric and isolation cases.

"We'll be taking the teams through those rooms then as well as they are completed," said MacNair.

"The target is still early fall to have the building construction completed and then working on getting everything set up to take patients either very late this calendar year or early next calendar year."

Their attention will then turn to the community services building, which is still very much in the early stages.

"That building isn't really set to be completed until the first quarter of 2026," said MacNair.

The final step will be renovation of the area that currently houses offices for services like public health, home care, and administrative staff. It will be renovated into new cancer care and ambulatory care space, followed by an expansion of the emergency department along with a new operating room on the second floor and some administrative spaces as well.

"We're just in the process of sorting out the renovation schedule," said MacNair. "We've gone through a first phase of design, and we got a costing for it, and it's not insignificant ... and then we'll get the timelines set out."

PVLIP launches voter information campaign

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Pembina Valley Immigration Partnership (PVLIP) is launching an information campaign to ensure everyone who has the right to vote in the upcoming federal election knows how to do so.

Got Citizenship? Go Vote! will ensure new voters or those who haven't voted in awhile don't feel the need to avoid the ballot box on Election Day (Monday, April 28) due to uncertainty surrounding the process, says PVLIP coordinator Elaine Burton Saindon.

"The intention is to help promote civic engagement with newcomers," she says. "Helping new Canadians who have just become citizens recognize that that brings them the opportunity to have their voice heard through the voting process. We hope new Canadians would exercise that freedom."

While some immigrants come to Canada already familiar with the democratic process from voting in their native countries, for others this is the first time they've had the opportunity to cast a vote in a free and fair election.

But even if you've voted before in another country, it can still be a bit overwhelming to navigate things in a new place, Burton Saindon notes, so PVLIP is hoping to allay any uncertainty or fears people may have.

"We're not getting into the politics of it—we're not explaining who to vote for," she stresses. "It's more about understanding the process, understanding your rights and the benefits of voting and what it can mean for you and your community."

A page on their website (pvlip.ca/govote) outlines who's eligible to vote, how to register to do so, what a voter's card is and what information is on it, how to find information about the candidates running in your district, where to go on voting day or how to vote by mail, and what you need to bring with you if voting in person.

"We want to do this for each election—federal, provincial, and municipal—going forward," Burton Saindon shares.

PVLIP is also teaming up with Elections Canada to host information sessions at community centres in Altona, Morden, and Winkler in the weeks ahead.

Details on those events were still being firmed up at press time, but head to the PVLIP website for dates and times as they become available.

Flyers knock out Nighthawks

Winkler's Trevor Dalton uses his speed to get around Niverville's Evan Panzer in game five Saturday, which Winkler won 4-3 in double overtime.

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Flyers got a game six win Monday night to take their MJHL playoff series against the Niverville Nighthawks four games to two.

Monday's game was a hard-fought one. Niverville drew first blood five minutes in and then made it 2-0 at the top of the second period before Winkler's offensive lines came to life with a goal from Brody Beauchemin 14 minutes in followed by the tying goal from Liam Carlone five minutes later.

Andrew Morton then scored what proved to be the winning goal in the third period's fifth minute.

Leif Ekblad was between the posts in the 3-2 win, making 20 saves off the 22 he faced. His teammates sent 39 the other way.

The series proved to be a roller-coaster throughout the past week. It was tied at one game each when the two teams took the ice in Winkler for game three March 25.

That proved to be another nail-biter, with Winkler narrowly taking it 4-3.

Max Lavoie got Winkler on the board late in the first, but Niverville returned the favour a minute later.

Beauchemin and Carlone pulled the Flyers back into the lead with a pair of goals in the second period's sixth and seventh minutes, but Niverville got started on closing the gap with their second of the night a few minutes later and their third at the start of the final frame. Brady Craik got the game-winner for Winkler in the third period's 14th minute.

Ernst had a 22-save night in net as the Flyers outshot the Nighthawks 35-25.

Playing in Niverville two nights later, the Nighthawks managed to tie the series again, this time with a 3-2 win.

The score was tied at 2-2 after 20 minutes thanks to goals from Craik and Nicolas Mckee.

After a scoreless second period, Niverville got their third past Ernst to win it.

Winkler once again won the shots battle 27-23, with Ernst posting 20 saves.

The pendulum swung back the other way Saturday night with a 4-3 overtime win for Winkler in game five.

The Flyers dominated in shots this game, 54 to Niverville's 21, but after scoring three goals in the opening frame (two from Morton and one from Charles-M Bernier), Winkler's offensive lines failed to find a chink in the armour of Niverville netminder Austin Dubinsky, while the Nighthawks tied it up in the second period.

Across the rink, Ernst and Leif Ekblad split time in net, with Ernst making six saves out of the nine he faced and Ekblad denying all 12 that came his way.

It sent things into not one but two overtime periods for a decision. Mckee put an end to it with a goal working off assists from Beauchemin and Isaiah Peters seven minutes into the second extra period.

Meanwhile, in the league's other playoff series, the Dauphin Kings knocked out the Waywayseecappo Wolverines in five games and the Northern Manitoba Blizzard beat the Neepawa Titans, also in five.

On Monday, the Portage Terriers won their game six to bounce the Steinbach Pistons out of the playoffs.

Morris Curling Club hosting send-off for deaf curling teams

By Siobhan Maas

The Morris Curling Club is set to host a Team Send-Off and Fundraiser on April 12 for two elite deaf curling teams that will represent the Club and Canada on the world stage.

The men's and mixed doubles teams, which both curl out of the Morris rink, will compete at the 2025 World Deaf Curling Championships in Minneapolis, Minnesota from April 22 to May 4. At least ten countries will be represented at the event.

SUPPLIED PHOTO

Ross Lavallee and Susanne Beriault will compete in the mixed doubles event.

The men's team consisting of Joe Comte, Bill Kluchnik, Frank Chung, and Cam Hurst, is coached by Morris-area residents Chris and Lorne Hamblin, both Level 4 NCCP Olympic coaches who have worked with deaf curlers from across Canada since 2014.

Barb Zbeetnoff of British Columbia is coaching the mixed doubles team of Ross Lavallee and Susanne Beriault. All curlers are Winnipeggers except Chung, who is from British Columbia.

To honour the memory of teammate Brian Weselowski, who passed in 2023, the men's team will play with his name on the shoulder of their team jackets.

As part of their final preparations for the Worlds, both teams will be in Morris for a training weekend April 11-13.

The weekend will be spent mostly on-ice, to build consistency for the teams in both sweeping and throwing using the robotic rock thrower unique to the Cargill Curling Training Centre.

"Deaf curling events are always unique for spectators because the athletes don't have the same ability to communicate as other curlers," noted Chris Hamblin. "There is no possibility of discussion in the middle of the game."

SUPPLIED PHOTO

From left: Chris Hamblin, Joe Comte, Bill Kluchnik, Frank Chung, Cam Hurst and Lorne Hamblin are off to the 2025 World Deaf Curling Championships later this month.

"The athletes have tools they already use, like one communicator and one sweeper, but we will hone communication while sweeping during the weekend."

To show support and help offset the costs associated with the championship, a fundraiser send-off social is being organized for Saturday, April 12 from 7-11 p.m. at the curling club.

"We wish the team well at the World's and hope to raise funds to help offset their costs," shared Lorne Hamblin. "Unlike most World events, there is very little funding support for the teams and most of the costs are covered by the athletes."

A silent auction and 50/50 draw will help support the teams. A light lunch will be served.

"This social is a huge opportunity for the community to recognize some of the amazing athletes that train at the Cargill Curling Training Centre," said Lorne "I extend an invitation to all, especially curling club members, Mayor Scott Crick, and MPs Branden Leslie and Lauren Stone, to attend this special send-off for a community not often recognized at this level."

Those interested in donating prizes for the silent auction or attending the event can contact Chris at 204-746-3330 or Lorne at 204-712-5842.

35th Annual Carman Gun and Hobby Show Set for April 5

By Ty Dilello

PHOTO SUBMITTED

The Carman Gun and Hobby Show will return for its 35th edition on April 5, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Carman Hall. Over 80 vendors will have tables set up with guns, ammunition, knives, and a variety of supplies.

The Carman Gun and Hobby Show is set to return for its 35th year on Saturday, April 5 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Carman Hall (60 1st St NW). Admission is $7 for the day, and children 12 and under are free.

The event is organized by Bruce Reid, who can be contacted at carman-gunshow@gmail.com.

"This year, we have 80 tables with guns, ammo, knives and hunting-related items for sale," said Bruce Reid. "Back for another show, there will be food served by Crazy Lady's Cafeteria, which is always a big hit. It's all amazing as when I first started the spring show in Carman, I wasn't too sure how it would work out. Well it worked out as it's now the biggest one-day show in the province. This is possible due to the great attendance every show and I have a great crew which makes this easier to put together."

er."

The Gun Show features a special charity component, where an item is raffled off and 100% of the proceeds are donated to a different charity each year. This year, the proceeds will benefit the palliative care unit at the Carman Hospital.

Reid is excited to see how many people will come out on Oct. 26 to the Carman Hall. The canteen will also be open all day for people to come and get a bite to eat.

"Every show, I try and change it up to make it more interesting," Reid said. "It sounds like my regular crew of volunteers will be returning for another which I couldn't do the show without them. There are some new vendors which adds to the show, with several door prizes and the usual raffle. The interest from guys and gals in the sport seems to have really grown over the years."

Yes I Can program open for nominations

By Lorne Stelmach

An annual initiative of the Nellie McClung Foundation that aims to inspire confidence and empowerment among girls is again in search of candidates to support.

The Yes I Can program highlights and celebrates achievements and accomplishments in a variety of fields like science, business, politics, and more. Nominations are open until April 30.

As one of the 2022 recipients, Divya Sharma is a testament to the impact it can have on a young woman like herself.

"The Nellie McClung Yes I Can video and leadership series strengthened my belief in the power of women empowering women," she shared. "It opened doors, connected me with inspiring leaders in the community and gave me the confidence to lead on a bigger stage.

"The mentorship, support and connection I received with women from all walks of life played a major role in shaping my path to becoming the youngest and 100th president of the University of Manitoba students' union."

The Yes I Can leadership awards celebrate five outstanding young women aged 16 to 25 by showcasing their achievements in a video profile series

It provides a platform to share their unique personal and professional stories and celebrate their journey toward becoming future leaders.

Now in its fourth year, the program has featured remarkable women who have excelled in areas including sports, culture, education, arts, science, community, entrepreneurship, and other professional environments.

Their compelling narratives, captured on video, have not only celebrated personal success but also inspired countless girls across Manitoba to pursue their dreams with confidence, said Myrna Driedger, founder of the Nellie McClung Foundation and Yes I Can program.

"Programs like Yes I Can are essential in helping girls confidently navigate the challenges of their teen years," said Driedger, who emphasized the transformative impact of the program. "By showcasing these stories, we empower girls and young women to embrace their potential and confidently become leaders at any age."

Ibukun Okunnu, who is a spokesperson for the program, said being part of it has given her an incredible opportunity not only to inspire young women and girls but also to be inspired by them.

"Year after year, I am in awe of the remarkable young women in Manitoba who are quietly paving the way for themselves and others," she said.

"I have grown in ways I never imagined—learning to be confident, to turn my ideas into action and to embrace the power of saying Yes I Can. This mindset has made me bolder, more daring and more confident, and I hope that through this program, even more young women and girls will feel empowered to embrace their own potential"

> SABOURIN, FROM PG. 11

Sabourin recounts his research into their arrival in 1876, when approximately 500 Mennonites and 280 Francophones shared passage on an Ontario steamer bound for Manitoba. Trapped in ice on Lake Superior, the ship eventually drifted free, but not before 18 Francophones set out on foot in search of help.

Originally assigned to land covered in dense bush and rocks, the Francophones successfully appealed to Ottawa for a new settlement location, which led to the establishment of St. Jean, Letellier, and St. Joseph.

Through these historical accounts and his own reflections, Sabourin's message is one of unity and cooperation. "When we cultivate an awareness of our common humanity, our world will be better equipped to solve challenges and achieve peace and happiness for all."

Sabourin will officially launch Prai- rie Roots and Wings at the Altona Mall on April 19 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This event offers readers the opportunity to meet the author, hear more about his experiences, and get a signed copy of the book.

As Sabourin reflects on his journey—from a small farm in Manitoba to the far corners of the world—he hopes his book will inspire others to embrace adventure, appreciate history, and, above all, recognize the importance of kindness and connection in today's world.

> BUDGET, FROM PG. 10

Reflecting that, the town has no new borrowing planned for 2025, focusing instead on managing existing long-term debts associated with past infrastructure projects.

Schroeder emphasized the council's commitment to data-driven decision-making, stating, "I really want to point out that our council is committed to making good decisions based on data of the community," Schroeder said.

"We recognize the importance of balancing financial responsibility with the need to invest in our community. By leveraging grants and maintaining disciplined financial planning, we can move forward with necessary improvements while keeping taxes reasonable."
